

While we'd love you to come to our offices to discuss your cosmetic injection needs we encourage you to use this guide to help maximize your safety and efficacy when getting treatment.

The guidelines below are opinions. We always encourage you to speak in depth with your doctor about your specific case.

Is there a core specialty, board certified physician (plastic surgeon, dermatologist or facial plastic surgeon) involved in cosmetic injections?

[yes]

[no]

The answer should be yes. Core specialty physicians have injectable training as part of their residency and part of their board certification and may have a deeper understanding of management of complications or difficult cases.

Who performs the injections?

[physician]

[other]

In some cases there may be an advantage to having the physician perform the injections.

How much experience does the injector have?

[more than 2 years] [other]

Typically injectors that have at least two years of experience or have injected at least 200 patients tend to have a level of experience that may produce better results. They also have the ability to easily address patient needs and concerns.

Is the injectable medication sealed or recently reconstituted? Does it come in the regular manufacturers packaging?

[yes]

[no]

The packaging should be from the manufacturer and if not sealed the injector should share (if applicable) when the medication was reconstituted. Older medication can lose its potency.
